This

He minded no one of these things more than the rest, horum ille nihil egregie præter cætera studebat. There were no more but five, quinque omnino fuerunt. He said there was one, and no more, unum dicebat, præterea neminem. More than every one will believe, supra quam cuique credibile est. He gave her not a word more, nec ullo mox sermone dignatus est. It is more than you know, clam te est. More than once or twice, iterum & iterum. What is there more to be done? quid restat? I desired nothing more, nihil mihi potius fuit.  On, is answered by several Latin prepositions; viz.
 A, ab; as, A country on the right hand inaccessible by reason of rocks, regio à dextra scopulis inaccessa. It is on the right hand, est à dextra. We both depend on one chance, casu pendemus ab uno.
 Ad; as, On this hand there is a chapel, est ad hanc manum fa-cellum. What is on the right hand, and what on the left, quid ad dextram, quid ad sinistram.
 Cum; as, If it were not so, you would be hardly on his side, ni hæc ita essent, cum illo haud staret.
 De, e, ex; as, He dependeth on you, de te pendet. On what ground, qua de causa. On a sudden, de vel ex improviso, derepente. On both sides, ex utraque parte. He fought on horse back, ex equo pugnavit.
 In; as, He ought to be well known on whom a benefit is conferred, mores ejus spectant erunt, in quem beneficium confertur. He laid out money in husbandry, sumptum fecit in culturam. He felt on the body of his noble friend, in egregii corpus amici procidit. Having spent abundant of money on that work, con-sumptā in id opus ingenti pecuniā.
 On either side there is great power in fortune, in utramque partem magna est vis in fortuna.
 Lay not the blame on me, ne conferas culpam in me. He had a ring on his finger, in digito ha-buit anulum. The soldiers fell on their knees, procubuerunt in genua milites. A bird lighted on the next tower, avis in proxima turre confedit.
 Secundum; as, I give judgment on your side, secundum te judico, vel litem do.
 Sub; as, On that condition, sub ea conditione. On pain of perpetual slavery, sub pœna perpetuæ servitutis.
 Super; as, The Romans leaped on the very targets, super ipsa Romani scuta salierunt.
 The Preposition is sometimes understood; as, She kept her eyes fixed on the ground, solo fixos o-culos tenebat. She took up that money on use, id argentum sanore sumptit. On these terms you may have her, istis legibus habes licet. He is said to have played excellently on a fiddle, fidibus præclare cecinisse dicitur. They are said to live all on honey, melle solo coguntur vivere. One may live very well on a little, vivit parvo bene. On the first opportunity, primo quoque tempore. Came you on foot, or on horse back? venisti pedibus, an equo?

On my honest word, bonâ fide. We have relied and trusted on your promises, tuis promissis freti & in-nixi sumus.
 On the ground, Humi, humo.
 On either side, Utrobique.
 On neither side, Neutro.
 On this side, Hinc.
 On that side, Illinc. On this side and on that side, hinc atque illinc.
 On both sides, Utrunque, utrobi-que.
 On all sides, or on every side, Undique, ex omni parte.
 On this side, or on this side of,
 Ci, citra.
 On the other side, or farther side of, Trans, ultra. I think sometimes to get me some gardens on the other side of Tiber, cogito interdum trans Tiberim hortos aliquos parare. There is nothing on the other side of the mountain, nihil est ultra illum montem.
 On foot, Pedes, 1. is.

 On [go on] Eja, age, progredere.
 On afore, I præ.
 Once, Semel. He had never seen her but once, semel omnino eam viderat. ¶ More than once, plus vice simplici. No man ever went once to that sacrifice, quod sacrificium nemo unquam adiit.
 Once a knave, and never an honest man, semel malus, semper malus.
 Once, or once on a time, Olim, quondam. A panther once by chance fell into a pit, panthera imprudens olim in foveam decididit. The state was once so vir-tuous, fuit ista quondam in republica virtus. ¶ If that would but once come to pass, quod si esset ali-quando futurum.
 At once, Semel & simul. I could not be here and there at once, ego hic esse & illic simul haud potui. ¶ I could not tell you all at once, non poteram unâ omnia narrare. War and famine at once assailing them, super bellum annonâ premente. [Prov.] One cannot do two things at once, simul forbare & flere haud facile factu est.
 To do two things at once, De eadem fidelia duos parietes deal-bare.
 One, Unus. One or two may despise these, unus & alter hæc spernant. This is all one with that, hoc unum & idem est atque illud. All under one, unâ operâ. ¶ There is hardly one in ten, vix decimus quisque est. There was not so much as one, neque quicquam omnium fuit. ¶ At one a clock, horâ primâ. It is all one to me, meâ nihil refert. It was all one to those that killed him, what he said, non interfuit occidentium quid diceret. They differ one from another, inter se diffident. How shall one deal with such folks? quid cum illis agas?

 As being one that understood, quippe qui intellexerat. He is made to pay four for one, actio in quadruplum datur. Reckoning it all one, as if he had made use of them, perinde æstimans ac

So, Ita, sic, ad hunc modum, hoc facto. It is so, sic est, ita se res habet. They say so, ita aiunt vel prædicant. Grant it be so, fac ita esse. As that was painful, so this is pleasant, ut illud erat molestum, sic hoc est jucundum. ¶ As you are kept here, so is my son there with you, ut vos hic, itidem illic apud vos servatur filius.
I wish it may be so, utinam id sit, ut ita sit Deus faxit. Nor is it so only, neque id solum. The matter is not so, aliter se res habet.
He thinketh he may do so, idem sibi arbitratur licere. If so be, that-- si est, ut-- It is even so in truth, id est profectò. Others perhaps do not think so, alii fortasse non item videntur. Why so I pray? quamobrem tandem? So came we to know it, inde est cognitio facta.
I hope it is so, ita spero quidem.
Since things are so, quæ cum ita sint. As I may so say, ut ita dicam. So be it, ita fiat.
So [so much] Adeo, ita, perinde, tantoperè. I am not so void of humanity, non adeo inhumano in-genio sum. They were so many, that-- ita multi fuerunt, ut-- Wherefore his coming was not so very acceptable, quare adventus eius non perinde gratus fuit. I am very glad you like it so much, tantoperè à te probari vehementer gaudeo. ¶ I should not be so un-civil, that-- non effem tam in-urbanus, ut-- They are so hindered by their studies, that-- suis studiis sic impediuntur, ut-- I am not so strong as either of you, minus habeo virium quam vestrum utroque. Nor are you so strong as Pontius, nec vos Pontii vires habetis. So as I told you yesterday, ita ut heri tibi narravi. If any be grown so insolent, siquis est insolentia processerit. Not so large as was looked for, non pro expectatione magnum.
So, or so that, Dum, dummodo, modo, ita si, si tantum. So I may not find myself imposed upon by him, dum ne ab hoc me falli comperiam. So there be a wall between us, dummodo inter me & te murus interfit. So that he set a price, modo ut sciam quanti indicer. I am sure he will, so he be but a citizen, volet, certò scio, civis modo hæc fit. ¶ I will do what I can, yet so that I be not undutiful to my father, quod potero faciam, tamen ut pietatem colam.
So, or so then, Quamobrem, quapropter, quare, quocirca. So then you have no reason to fear, that I will devise any thing of my own head, quapropter nihil est quod metuas, nequid mecum figam. ¶ So when this was done, hoc igitur facto. If any be grown so impudent, si quis eo insolentia processerit.
So far, Eò, eatenus, in, tantum, quod. He proceeded so far, in tantum processit. If he proceed so far, si eatenus progreditur. So far as I know he did not come, non venerat quod sciam.
Why so? Quamobrem vel quam ob rem?
So far from, Adeo non, ut-- ita non, ut-- tantum abest, ut-- non modo, ne-nedum. I was so far from doing it, that-- adeo non feci, ut-- You are so far from loving, that-- ita non amas, ut ne-- They were so far from selling, that they bought, non modo non vendebant, verum etiam emebant. Grammar was once so far from being in any esteem at Rome, that it was not so much as in any use, grammatica olim Romæ ne in usu quidem, nedum in ho-nore ullo erat.

So far as, Quod, quoad, quantum. So far as is possible, quoad eius fieri possit. So far as I understand, quantum intelligo.
So far off, Tam procul, tam longe.
So great, Tantus, tam magnus.
So little, Tantulus, tantillus, engaged in the same cause with myself, cum viderem virum, qui in eadem causa, quâ ego, fuisset. The same that, or as, Idem ac, atque, et, ut. Her mind is the same that it was, animus ejus idem est, ac fuit. I am of the same temper as formerly, eodem sum ingenio atque olim. Vesta is the same as Terra. Vesta eadem est et Terra. I do not, as I have seen other foolish persons do in comedies, non ego idem facio, ut alios in comœdiis amentes facere vidi.

That [a conjunction] Ut, ne, quod, quod. It is possible that I may be deceived, potest fieri ut fallar. The oftener that I see you, the more I love you, quod te sæpius video, eo magis amo. Are you such a fool, that you know not these things? adeone es ignarus, ut hæc nescias? See that you be courageous, fac animo bono fis. See that you do not defend me, tu cave defendas. I know now that my son is in love, scio jam quod filius amet meum.

Note, 1. That signifying because, and denoting time past, when it cometh before a verb, may be rendered into Latin by quod; as, I am glad that you are returned safe, Quod tu redisti incolumis gaudeo. But that signifying to the end that, denoting time to come, and coming before a verb which signifieth to desire, fear, command, labour, take care, &c. must be made by ut; as, I desire that you will act the play, ut tu fabulam agas. volo. I am afraid that this stranger will not stand it out to my father, metuo ut subestet hospes. He gave orders to me, that it should be bought, mihi mandavit, ut emeretur. I laboured that you should accree, laboravi, ut vos decerneretis. Take care, that you may preserve your health, cura, ut valeas.

Note, 2. That quod and ut may generally be better omitted, if the verb immediately following them be put in the infinitive mood, and its nominative case changed into the accusative; as, They say that he manageth his own business, eum se negotium agere dicunt, pro quod ille agit. He biddeth him be without care, hunc jubet sine cura esse, for ut hic sine cura sit.

The, before a Noun substantive, may, for the most part, be omitted in translating into Latin, as being sufficiently included in the Noun itself; except it denote the particular thing mentioned before, and then it is to be translated by hic, hæc, hoc; ille, illa, illud; iste, ista, istud, according to the gender of its Substantive, and the particular thing thereby referred to, whether this, that, or the other; or when it is emphatically used to shew that some person or thing is more than ordinarily remarkable; as, Alexander the Great, Alexander ille Magnus. I the self same person, ego ille ipse. The same Medea is said formerly to have fled out of Pontus, Medea illa ex Ponto quondam profugisse dicitur. The same Fortune governeth of human affairs, illa ipsa rerum humanarum domina Fortuna. Then the same excellent man-- tum iste vir optimus--

From the one end to the other, A principio ad finem; ab ovis usque ad mala.

From the one to the other, Ultra citroque.

The before a comparative degree including in it [by how much, by so much] is to be made by quanto, tanto; quo, eo, hoc; tam, quam; as, The longer he is absent, the more I miss him, quanto diutius absit, magis cupio tanto. The more useful a science is, the more it is to be valued, scientia, quod plus prodest, eo est præstantior. The more ingenious a person is, the greater pains he taketh in teaching, quo quisque est ingeniosior, hoc docet laboriosius. The easier you live, the more upright you should be, quam vos facillime agitis, tam maxime vos æquo animo æqua noscere oportet.

Note 1. The word thing, or things, being sufficiently included in the adjective, may be often omitted in translating into Latin; as, It is a shameful thing, Indignum quidem est. Small things are often most justly compared with great ones, magnis sæpe rectissime parva conferuntur. Those things which are attended with very great difficulties, are to be esteemed as altogether impossible, quæ perdifficilia sunt, perinde habenda sunt, ac si effici non possint. It is a usual thing with me, solens meo more fecero. It cometh to, or is all the same thing, eodem redit. Things will not be always at this pass, omnium rerum est vicissitudo.
